GENERAL NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

The Disabled Steamship.

NEW YORK, May 13.—The officers of the steamship Richmond express the opinion that unless the Brussels, the disabled vessel, is delayed by a calm or head wind she will make her port in eight or ten days from the time they left her, so that by Thursday or Friday next we may expect to hear of her safe arrival at the other side. J. Gall, the optician, of New York, passenger on the City of Brussels, returned in the City of Richmond, leaving his baggage upon her and will again embark for Europe Saturday next on the outgoing trip of the vessel on which he started. Mr. Gall said to a reporter who boarded the Richmond at quarantine—you know we sailed on the 21st; nothing unusual occurred till Monday morning, the 23d. At about 7:45 o'clock the devotional exercises were disturbed by a crash that jarred the vessel very perceptibly from bow to stern. The engines at once stopped and many of the passengers went on deck to ascertain the cause. It was learned a shaft had broken. The intelligence caused no alarm among the passengers, and officers of the vessel soon satisfied the anxious passengers that no danger need be apprehended. Sail was set and the vessel proceeded on her course. The weather was very fine for a few days, and at the time the vessel was nearly becalmed. Wednesday, the 25th, we sighted and signaled the French steamer which returned the signals, but bore away, and made no effort to communicate with us. We did not ascertain her name, but her actions in failing to come and communicate with us were severely criticised, and Saturday, the 28th, we sighted an Irish bark from Cork, lumber laden, and gave her the signal of distress. She bore down and coming alongside promised to report the accident to any vessel she met. We continued to make steady but slow progress under sail, and Monday, the 30th ult., fell in with a Norwegian brig which offered assistance, but as we required nothing, she promised to report to passing vessels, and then bore away on her course. We sighted no more vessels until on Tuesday, when to our great joy we encountered the City of Richmond, with which we exchanged signals. She came alongside, and after learning the cause of our delay supplied us with such provisions as the Brussels is likely to require. All the passengers were in the best of health, and spirits, especially the pilgrims, who spent most of the time in religious exercises, three services being held per day, at the grand saloon. Mr. Gall reports the ice supply was exhausted and in consequence all parts of fresh beef valued at $30,000 will be a total loss.

THE EFFECT ON THE SENATE.

The annexed is from Washington dispatches April 26) to the Philadelphia Times:

The assurance that the Republican majority in the Senate will be whittled down to four as soon as the Louisiana and South Carolina Senators are sworn in, and the knowledge that there are more than four anti-Hayes men among the Republican Senators, has started to renewed activity a plot, which has long been hatching, to break up the Anthony ring, which for long years has had a death-grip on the Senate patronage. It is rather more than probable that Sergeant-at-Arms French and Col. Gorham will both be ousted. There are six Republican Senators who have openly avowed their personal animosity to French, and they hold the balance of power and will unless force the nomination of some other man. Ex-Congressman Jerry Rusk is said to have good show for the place. The position of the Democrats effecting a reorganization of the Senate committees with the help of the carpet-baggers is also hinted here, and is among the possibilities, but is not probable. In the recent reorganization of the Senate committees the Republican leaders wisely averse the danger and cleverly guarded against it by giving each of the four carpet-bag Senators holding over better chairmanships than the Democrats could afford to give them. Tom Dorsey is head of the committee on the District of Columbia, Spencer of military affairs, Patterson of education and labor, and Kellogg of enrolled bills.

SCORED.—This expressive word, says the San Francisco Call, is torn from its ordinary use and employed to describe the condition of the Continental Life Insurance Company after the company's officers had got through with it. The company was literally scooped. The real and other vitals were taken out of the body, leaving a few scattering bits of property around there which had not been carried off in the scoop. The officials appropriated to their own use and squandered over $3,000,000. The liabilities of the company are $5,800,000; assets $2,681,500. The difference represents what the officers have stolen from policy holders, many of whom were poor and depended on this for their support. The story, told in the New York papers, is one which does no credit to the administration of law in business trusts in that city. Hundreds of people have been shamefully defrauded by this means, and no one is punished. Three arch rascals—the president, acting president and secretary—stole or wasted these three millions, and, so far as is known, are living in luxury on the proceeds.

OLYMPIA RAILROAD.—We take the following from the Seattle Dispatch: On Monday the commissioners of Thurston county met and extended the time for the completion of the railroad. It will be a broad gauge, the same as the N. P. R. R. The subsidy amounts to $5,000 for 20 years at 8 per cent. per annum, 2,000 acres of land and 200 town lots in Olympia. It is a matter of local pride with us that a Seattle man—Amos Bowman—will be the man to take hold of the matter and put it in operation. He secured the capital to complete the work on his recent trip to San Francisco, and will soon commence operations. The grading was almost entirely done by the citizens of Olympia some four years ago, and the expense of surfacing the old grade would be but trifling. There is but little expensive bridges to erect. The rail is a recent, a combination of wood and iron which is amply heavy enough for all present needs of the trade. With this road once built Olympia would soon command all the Boisfort and Chehalis valley trade.

AN EFFECTIVE PRESCRIPTION.—The New York Times of May 1st says:

We killided last week to certain outrages in Walthorpe county, Ga., where, among others, a negro preacher was flogged to cure him of fanaticism. We now see by the Ogle Echo, published in the county, that the prescription was effective. The Echo prints the following:

Anthony Thurster, the negro preacher, who was so severely whipped by a party of disguised men near Maxey's recently, asks us to announce to his white friends that from this time forward he would prove himself a better man—will never again make a political speech, deliver a sermon, or vote a republican ticket; from henceforth he is an unswerving Democrat. We are glad that Anthony's eyes are at last opened to a proper course for him to pursue, but sorry that such stringent measures had to be adopted ere he would, as it were, 'be born again.'"

Senator Saunders, of Nebraska, is full of distress about the policy of the Administration. He is afraid there is going to be a split in the party," but he proposes to "take things as they come for the best. He proposes to "let the "experiment be tried," and hope for the best.

THE RIGHT TO ENFORCE THE CONSTITUTION.

Under this caption the New York Times of May 1st presents some considerations on a subject to which allusion has been made by the OREGONIAN on several occasions recently:

The movement which we have already noticed among Democrats to secure the repeal of the laws for the enforcement of the war amendments to the Constitution, is causing some embarrassment to the leaders of that party. They are willing enough to take part in it, if they can present a decent front to the country while doing so. But as these laws are distinctly intended to protect the rights of the colored people, and as the newly established Governments in South Carolina and Louisiana are loud in their professions of justice to this class, the demand for the repeal of these laws forms a curious comment on these professions. If Hampton and Nicholls are sincere in their promises to protect the colored people, why should they object to laws which can have no application if those promises are loyally fulfilled? If the party of Nicholls and Hampton are so eager to deprive the General Government of all means of enforcing those promises, what are the promises worth? These are questions which the Democrats will have to answer. The laws, as they standain the Revised Statutes, are clear and explicit. No Republican Senate can have any motive for repealing them. If the Democratic House proposes their repeal as the price of the army appropriation, their motive for such a proposition is perfectly clear. It can only be a desire to get all the power in their own hands, and to defy the country to help itself, however they may violate their pledges.

After presenting a synopsis of the laws to enforce the amendments as they stand in the Revised Statutes, the Times goes on to say:

It is against the laws which we have last referred to that the animosity of the Democratic leaders is now directed. It is their desire to strip the Federal government of all power to protect the equal rights of citizens. They aim to remand that duty to the State authorities, and to make it perfectly safe for those authorities to neglect or ignore it. And this they now have the impudence to propose as the price of an army appropriation bill. Probably, if they fail in getting what they seek in this way, they will tack on a similar proposition to the general appropriation bill at the regular session, as last December they strove to block the wheels of government to secure a repeal of the election laws. We have only to say that any such attempt, if aided by the votes of Southern Democrats, will force the country to abandon all confidence in the sincerity of the pledges recently given.

DECISION IN THE U. S. DISTRICT COURT BY JUDGE DEADY.

U. S. District Court—District of Oregon.

TUESDAY, MAY 8, 1877.

The United States v. Hugh A. Barr. Indictment for having counterfeit coin in possession, knowing the same to be false.

Crimes—Repeal. Under § 13 of the R. S. the repeal of an act defining a crime and its punishment does not prevent the prosecution and conviction of a party for the prior violation thereof. Repeal of Statute. A statute is repealed by the enactment of another repugnant to it, or one covering the whole subject of the former.

DEADY, J.

By the indictment in this case the defendant is accused on January 8, 1877: (1.) Of having in his possession 100 pieces of counterfeit coin made in the resemblance of American silver half dollars, knowing the same to be false and counterfeit; (2) Of uttering and passing such coin; and, (3) Of attempting to utter and pass the same with like knowledge, contrary to § 5457 of the R. S.

The trial jury found the defendant guilty of the first charge and the District Attorney then dismissed the indictment as to the second and third.

A motion is now made in arrest of judgment because it appears that on January 16, 1877, said § 5457 was amended so as to provide that the having of counterfeit coin in possession with knowledge of its character is not a crime unless such possession is also accompanied "with an intent to defraud."

The motion is based upon the well known rule as announced in The General Pinkney and Cargo, 5 Cr. 283, by Ch. J. Marshall—"that after the expiration or repeal of a law, no penalty can be enforced, nor punishment inflicted, for violations of the law committed while it was in force, unless some special provision be made for that purpose by statute;" and again stated by Mr. Justice Field, in U. S. v. Tyner, 11 Wall. 95,—"There can be no legal conviction, nor any valid judgment pronounced upon conviction unless the law creating the offense be at the time in existence." To the same effect, see U. S. v. Manu, 1 Gall. 182; Anon, 1 Wash. C. C. 88; Norris v. Crocker, 13 How. 440; Insurance Co. v. Ritchie, 5 Wall. 541; ex parte McCardle, 7 Wall. 514; U. S. v. Six Fer. Tubs, 1 Abb. U. S. R. 274; U. S. v. Finlay, Id. 366.

The section in force when the act which is charged in this indictment as a crime was committed having been superseded by the amended one of January 16, 1877, no prosecution can be maintained against the defendant on account of it, unless the statute has specially so provided. The mere fact of having counterfeited coin in possession although with a knowledge of its character, is no longer a crime. It must be accompanied with an actual intent to defraud. It is admitted that no provision has been made by the act amending § 5,457 for the prosecution of crimes committed under it. But § 13 of the R. S. contains a general rule on the subject which meets and covers the case at every point. It provides:—"The repeal of any statute shall not have the effect to release or extinguish any penalty, forfeiture or liability incurred under such statute, unless the repealing act shall so expressly provide, and such statute shall be treated as still remaining in force for the purpose of sustaining any proper action or prosecution for the enforcement of such penalty, forfeiture or liability." The "liability" of the defendant for the act charged in the indictment consisted in his being bound or subject to punishment for it as provided in said § 5,457; and this liability was "incurred"—met with, or run against—when such act was committed, namely, January 8, 1877. Section 13 supra, declares that the substitution or repeal of § 5,457 shall not have the effect to "extinguish" this liability, which is equivalent to declaring what the same section further on specifically provides, that said § 5,457 shall, for the purposes of this prosecution be considered still in force.

Counsel for the defendant makes the point that the act of January 16, 1877, which provides that § 5,457 of the R. S. "be and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows," does not repeal said § 5,457, and, therefore, the case is not within the saving power of § 13, supra. True, the word "repeal" is not used in the act, but the declaration that a particular section of a statute "is hereby amended so as to read as follows,"—followed by such section as amended whether by addition or omission, has become the recognized and proper legislative formula for substituting one section for another; and any substitution of one provision of a statute for another, whether directly, as here, or by implication, as on account of the repugnancy between them, is so far a repeal of the latter.

The rule on this subject is expressed by Mr. Justice Field in U. S. v. Tyner, supra, as follows: "When there are two acts upon the same subject the rule is to give effect to both if possible. But if the two are repugnant in any of their provisions, the latter act, without any repealing clause, operates to the extent of the repugnancy as a repeal of the first; and even where two acts are not in express terms repugnant, yet if the latter act cover the whole subject of the first, and embraces new provisions, plainly showing it was intended as a substitute for the first act, it will operate as a repeal of that act." See also, Norris v. Crocker, supra, 439.

The provision in the amended § 5,457, defining the crime of having counterfeit coin in possession is certainly repugnant to that in the old one, because it requires that such possession shall be accompanied with intent to defraud. Therefore, the old section is, so far as the crime in this case is concerned, repealed. Again, the new section covers the whole subject of the old, with the addition of this provision, thereby plainly showing that it was intended as a substitute for the latter, and therefore it operates as a repeal of the whole thereof. Besides, this argument proves too much; for if § 5,457 has not been repealed by the act of January 16, 1877, it is still in force, and there is no cause to arrest a judgment upon the verdict of guilty in this case, under it.

This § 13 is a salutary provision, and if it, or something like it, had always been incorporated in the statutes of the States and the United States, it would have prevented many a lame and impotent conclusion in criminal cases, in which the defendant escaped punishment, because the legislature, in the hurry and confusion of amending and enacting statutes, had forgotten to insert a clause to save offences and liabilities already committed or incurred from the effect of express or implied repeals.

But the wisdom of this change of the law concerning the crime of having counterfeit coin in possession, is more than questionable. It will operate principally to protect counterfeiters and utterers of counterfeit coin in the making and circulation of false money as true. The possession of counterfeit coin in any considerable quantity with the knowledge of its character, is almost incompatible with innocence, and in any case is dangerous to the community. Such possession may be innocent, but it is not likely, and it can scarcely be useful except in the commission of a crime. Upon this ground it ought to be prohibited and punished, like the sale of unlabeled poisons and the transport and custody of inflammable and explosive substances, except under conditions and precautions prescribed by law. It is sufficient if a party charged with such possession is allowed to prove that it was innocent, by showing that it was had without intention to injure or defraud any one. The motion is disallowed.

William H. Effinger for the defendant.

The defendant was then sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the penitentiary of Oregon.

The Victoria Standard deplores the defenceless condition of that place and says: "In the event of war being declared with Russia, there would not be the shadow of a chance of our city loan being subscribed in London. THE COUNTRY NORTH OF US.

GUEMES ISLAND, SHIP HARBOR AND SURROUNDING COUNTRY. LA CONNER AND THE SKAGIT VALLEY—HUNDREDS OF SETTLERS POURING INTO THIS PART OF PUGET SOUND.

GUEMES ISLAND, SHIP HARBOR, W. T., May 1, 1877.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Will you permit an admirer of the OREGONIAN who is finding a home among our people, to say a few words to immigrants seeking homes in Washington Territory. Here we are beautifully situated on this lovely island, which guards the right beach of Ship Harbor, of time honored memory. From this spot we can see westward across the island country, the grand old mount of Vancouver Island; to the east a magnificent view of the celebrated

SKAGIT PASS,

And the Cascade Range looms up in grandeur before the eye of the stranger as he comes into the harbor from the straits on the flying steamer Dispatch on every Friday afternoon, on its way to Bellingham Bay and Semiahmoo; or from out "Fididle-dalgo-dingo bay" on the commodious steamer J. B. Libby, both from Seattle by different routes, of which we will speak further on. Just to the north of the pass can be seen that grandest of all snow-capped peaks, Mount Baker, as it points to the stars in God's firmament. There it stands a sentinel cast from God Almighty's foundry—a majestic monarch. Here in Whatcom county can be seen more grandeur in nature—the waters, mountains, island homes, with schools and happy people, with now and then a cloud which passes away as in other homes. The people are hospitable, intelligent, and many of them thrifty, and determined to make this the favored spot on Puget Sound for comfort and wealth—in time. Any of your Oregonians coming this way just ask Captain Monroe of the Dispatch to stop at the new wharf at Ship Harbor, and there they will be met by us and our beautiful sail boat, the

"WHITE PIGEON OF GUEMES ISLAND,"

And with pleasure we will take them to any portion of the archipelago to look for claims on Lopez, Orcas, Cypress, Fidalgo, or San Juan Islands—that island given to us by the good Emperor William in the arbitration. Kind old gentleman was William, indeed. There is room for all who wish to come here in preference to remaining elsewhere. As you come into the harbor you have Fidalgo on your right hand constantly until you turn the east point of Guemes toward the town of Whatcom.

A COPPER MINE

Has been discovered on Guemes Island, opposite Fidalgo Bay, but as yet the parties interested have done but little to bring out what Nature has surely hid away in the rocks of that claim. It is, in our opinion, too big a bonanza to trifle with. More on this some other time. On Fidalgo Bay there is quite a settlement, in fact, one more than on Guemes Island. There is one store, where all kinds of produce is bought and sold, and the J. B. Libby—formerly owned by Samuel Coulter, of Olympia; now owned by Com. Britton, of Seattle—calls on her trip to Whatcom and return, taking the freight, U. S. mails and passengers from all points between Seattle and Whatcom, once a week, leaving Seattle every Monday at 7 A. M. and returning on Wednesday night. This steamer also makes another trip to LaConner only, on the east side of Fidalgo leaving Seattle on Friday at 7 A. M., and returning Saturday, carrying mails, freight and passengers, for the accommodation of the Skagit country, which I wish to speak of now, but will again revert to Fidalgo.

LA CONNER

Is a thriving town, situated at the south end of the Swinomish slough, immediately surrounded by the largest area of rich farming land of any small town on Puget Sound. It has about three townships adjacent to it of farming land, and a portion of this is timber and about a township of it not timber, the balance is river bottom lands, including a township of tide, prairie or dyked lands. This dyked land will produce more grain to the acre than any other land on the coast, unless it be the Sacramento tule lands. The land back from the slough, through which it passes, in 1876 produced as much as 80 bushels of barley to the acre. But that dyked land is all taken; but back of that (or east of it) there is about a township mostly

BEAVER MARSH.

The little fellows are, however, not to be seen any more, having been trapped once too often by the Indians. This beaver marsh is covered by a dense growth of hardhack and willow very easily cleared, but it will require considerable ditching. "For land that you can stand on and shake an acre of it must be ditched." We all know the "Prairie State," our dear old Illinois, in many localities has received its ditches and drainage, and it pays to do this to marsh lands, especially when drained there is no better yielding land in the world. That land, after being properly ditched is capable of producing just as well as dyked lands, at least three and one-half tons to the acre! Think of it, and this is in the Skagit Valley. Adjacent to that and north of what is called the

SAMISH COUNTRY,

There is about a quarter of a township of these dyked lands all taken up. Then there is another quarter of the same township of that beaver marsh; the balance of that township contains some very fine fir timber. There are absolutely no wagon roads in all that country. A reason for this can be assigned to the fact that it is a very hard country through which to make roads, and the settlers have had water communication at hand, so there has been no incentive for making roads. On Guemes and Fidalgo islands you will find some roads, however, of recent construction. It is a very easy matter to jump into a canoe and go to LaConner from any part of the Skagit country and home again. Going east of LaConner 18 miles we are on the Skagit river and immediately strike a fine belt of timber—an immense body of it—and it is certainly as fine a tract of timber as there is on Puget Sound to-day, unless it is on Fidalgo and Guemes islands, immediately adjoining that, as we go east, we come to the

BITUMINOUS COAL FIELDS,

The extent of those fields not known as yet; but it is immense—"way up." A Northern Pacific engineer says he found a forteen-foot vein up among the mountains at the headwaters of the Skagit. The prospect is, that before another year we will have two mines working on the river. The chief obstacle to opening the mines has been the great ram in the river, called the Skagit Jam, which is rapidly giving way to the sturdy blows of strong and determined men, bent on opening up this river leading through this fertile valley. Some time in the spring, the Fanny Lake, owned by a good old Oregonian, Mr. Jere. Triggs, and mastered by J. S. Gill, a pioneer captain, whose enterprise takes him into very dangerous and questionable waters, made the first trip ever made by any boat up one fork of the Skagit river and down the other. A fine trade is opening up in that locality, for this steamer has recently gone into this trade, making two or three trips a week, in addition to the two regular trips of the J. B. Libby, so that people in the Skagit valley, or Samish country can have almost a daily boat to carry them and their produce to Seattle market. This summer will see this river open to navigation. Originally the jam was a mile and a quarter long, but now it is less than three fourths of a mile. The men go out on the jam and saw one log at a time and fish them out, and hose good for lumber are preserved. In this vast circle of land just mentioned, there are

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY FARMS

That includes about six townships. As a sample of what the country can produce, I will state that the Pacific Mail steamship Dakota, during the last fall and winter, has been carrying oats from the LaConner country ever since threshing, and at no time less than 5,000 sacks, and this is a grand record for our part of the country when we remember that

PUGET SOUND OATS

Will bring a better price in the San Francisco market than any other oats raised on the Pacific coast, never until this winter, however. The grain was cleaner, larger, and plumper, and weighed more than Oregon or California oats, and these came from the Swinomish country. The wheat here does not compare with the California wheat, owing to the dampness of the atmosphere. It is pretty good, but will not compare with the Eastern wheat, on the whole. No corn raised here to speak of, owing to the cold nights in summer. But how delicious and invigorating is a night's rest up here on Ship Harbor after the day's toil, at "slashing" timber, and burning the same in the dry season. Here all kinds of garden vegetables grow in the greatest abundance. Chicken ranches there are here, one on Fidalgo, and others talked of. All will do well if it is not overdone.

A GOOD DAIRY

Would pay handsomely, for butter will always bring a good price here until the N. P. R. R. is seen to cross the Skagit Pass, where by all means it should come. President C. B. Wrightsman, however, given us to understand in a recent letter upon this subject, that the terminus of the railroad is to be "at Tacoma on Commencement Bay." So note it be, but we will kick! Now for some of the reasons why a depot should be on Ship Harbor. As we have shown you here is a vast farming country! The grain must find a market; must go by steamer or scow to Seattle or Port Townsend, and there be transferred to ocean vessels. Now we are only five miles from the Fuca Straits, and a vessel can sail in alone without aiting to tow it, right into the harbor and anchor out of a storm or at a wharf, and take from an elevator or mill, or wharf, any and everything for shipment, and when loaded can spread its sail, take up anchor and go on to the sea at pleasure without cost of towage, and ship masters know too well what it costs to get towed to any point up the Sound, to turn away from this kind of argument; for we speak what we do know to be true, in our judgment. We do say that right on this harbor is the place to build a

SAWMILL,

For the finest logs on Puget Sound can be found on these islands, with which to supply it for all time to come. Then, too, this point above advanced, as to the cost of towage to other parts of the Sound, comes in with force again when considering the lumber carrying trade of the Pacific coast. Come along, you sawmill and lumber men from the East, who have money, for there are enough poor men, already in this northern country and Oregon. We want men with money; yet all are welcome.

It is a lamentable fact that at present the very best land on Fidalgo Island comprises the Indian reservation, opposite LaConner, along the banks of the Swinomish Slough—tide prairie of about two sections of land. There is another reservation—Lummi—on Bellingham Bay, which comprises

TWENTY-FIVE SECTIONS,

All of which is No. 1, a portion of it being rich bottom land, covered with tule and pea-vine matted so thick you cannot get through. It is the very richest kind of land. The upland is good for grain, vegetables or fruit for the timber has been destroyed by fire. Mr. Snow, surveyor of Seattle, who has kindly furnished us with many facts about this country which could only be obtained by a civil engineer, says he surveyed it and subdivided it into 40 acre tracts for the Indians; hence our information on this point. We are informed that the treaty with these Indians ends in 1877; the annuity having stopped in 1875, and the question asked by the coming settlers is, what is Secretary Schurz going to do about it?

THE NOOTSACK RIVER

comprises both forks of the river bearing that name, and between both forks, and one fork on both sides at mouth of the river this reservation extends, and thereby prevents a man from getting a foothold at the mouth of the river. Settlers have repeatedly tried to get the agent to make the Nootsack Indians go down and live on their reservation, but with all his efforts he cannot make them do it. Agent Wilbur might bring them to time! The reservations on Puget Sound cover a large proportion of the best farming lands on the Sound, and the land should now, or soon be thrown open to actual settlers if the Indian will not till it himself. Let Mr. Schurz look into this matter. Also permit me to add that our people having an eye to business, have secured the services of a Chicago artist who has come to the Sound to live, to take views of the different harbors, camps, coal mines, sawmills, Island homes, towns, etc., etc., to send East, so that men there can see stereoscopic views of our different points of financial interest, and at the same time get a birdseye view of this vast inland sea, the Mediterranean, (two times over) of the Pacific coast. The artist, Mr. C. J. Huntington, is now at this work.

HOW TO GET HERE,

Every Monday morning at 7 o'clock, the steamer J. B. Libby, Capt. Britton, master, leaves Seattle for Whatcom and all intermediate points. Same boat also makes a second trip to LaConner and return. On Thursday nights, at 10 o'clock, the Dispatch, Capt. Monroe, master, leaves Seattle for Port Townsend and Semiahmoo, stopping at all Islands in the Archipelago, and returning on Sundays at 4 P. M. The beautiful and commodious steamer North Pacific, owned by Capt. L. M. Star, with Capt. Clauer as master, leaves Seattle for Victoria, via Port Townsend, every Monday and Thursday at 5 A. M., her route being from Olympia to Victoria. In addition to this steamer, the Annie Stewart, Capt. Brouner, master, commences on Tuesday morning, May 8th, to run from Seattle to Port Townsend, making three trips a week for the further accommodation of the travel to this part of this inland sea. The Alida, carrying the U. S. mails from Tacoma to Seattle, leaves New Tacoma each day on the arrival of the N. P. R. R. passenger train from Portland. This boat has recently been somewhat repaired, and in addition to this it has

CAPT. TOM BRENNAN,

Old Sound Corn in command of her. Capt. Brennan's oceans of friends on the J. B. Libby route, which boat he has had charge of for years, are glad to hear of his determination not to take to land, right away. They have missed him on this old route, though Capt. Britton is a fine man and an old captain.

The Messenger, new and charming, in command of one, if not the oldest steamboat captains of the Sound.

CAPTAIN J. G. PARKER

Of Olympia, leaves that city every Monday, at 8 o'clock A. M., for Seattle, returning Tuesday, making three trips a week. Passengers will find him an extremely accommodating man—and gentlemanly conduct is what wins all the time, all over the world.

The flying little steamer

"OTTER,"

With Captain Jackson as master and the genial Edwards as purser, will start on the same day with the Annie Stewart, as opposition boats in the Seattle and Port Townsend trade, leaving Seattle at 7 o'clock A. M., arriving at Port Townsend at 2 P. M. Look for fun alive now. Will take pleasure in informing the public through THE OREGONIAN. More anon. LOOKOUT.

Frank Kennedy, says the Benton Democrat, of May 11th, the man tried, convicted and sentenced to the State penitentiary for a term of five years at hard labor, on a charge of grand larceny, broke jail on Monday afternoon last. He was left in the front room of the county jail, the deputy sheriff having him in charge thinking it too severe to keep him confined in the cell all day. He managed to spring the lock of the door and made his escape.

CONTRAST OF CLIMATE.

A postal card from H H Shaffer, Jacksonville, Chickasaw county, Iowa, dated April 30, contains this

Please send me a copy of your paper, as I would like to see how matters are going in your thriving State It snowed here on the 27th, 28th, and 29th. Snow now is eight inches deep. April was quite pleasant up to the 28th then this sudden change. Many of the birds had come. Now they sit around nearly frozen We hope to see the sun come out soon to melt the snow off

The writer of this has evidently heard that Oregon is a country not subject to these sudden and very disagreeable changes Such knowledge is spreading a good deal of late among the people of the older States. Were the facts all fully known to the inhabitants of Iowa we should have thousands every year from that State alone. The snow storm spoken of, was not limited to the section from which this correspondent writes it prevailed over large parts of Minnesota, Nebraska, Wisconsin and Northern Illinois. Among the attractions and advantages offered by our State, equability of climate is not valued highly enough by our old settlers. Timber, minerals, water, soil, crops, grazing and markets engross our attention, and we forget how favored we are in the matter of climate. In Iowa and the neighboring States, the opposite of this disagreeably "cold spell" will be experienced in a few weeks. A hot, moist, stifling atmosphere, precluding utterly all idea of comfort, will envelop and oppress the country. The changes are not quite so bad as those spoken of in the poet's fable:

They feel by turns the bitter change
Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce,
From beds of raging fire, to starve in ice
Their soft ethereal warmth, and there to pine
Immovable, infixed and frozen round
Periods of time, then hurried back to fire;—

but they are of the same kind, and too disagreeable to be endured by people who can get away from them, provided they know where there is a better climate. Hence it is that no one could go from Oregon to Iowa and be content to live there. The sharp contrast of climates, which we think little about while we stay here, is presented at once and with full force as soon as we go there to reside. We haven't much advice for Mr. Shaffer and his neighbors, but they may assure themselves if they come to Oregon, that they will not be shivering on the first of May with eight inches of snow on the ground and waiting for the sun to melt it away. We had no such weather, nor anything like it, the winter long. While Iowa and adjacent States were under this mantle of snow, people in many parts of Oregon were picking wild strawberries

THE WAR AND AMERICAN PROSPERITY.

It has heretofore been shown that grain is always high in European markets when Russia is engaged in war. Four-fifths of the exports of grain from that country are from Black Sea ports, and but one fifth from ports of the Baltic. It is expected that the Turks will pretty effectually shut up the former; therefore the supply must come from other parts of the world. The extent of the benefits to producers in America will depend very much on the duration of the war, and on the course that may be taken by England. The opinion that the war will be a great benefit to American industry is based on three assumptions, which are thus stated by the Chicago Times:

First—That the war would seriously interrupt the exportation of wheat from Russia and Roumania, and thus increase the demand for American breadstuffs in England, and proportionately increase prices. Second—That the war will last much longer than the later European conflicts have done, because the facilities for moving troops and supplies are inferior, as well as the military skill and organization of the powers primarily involved. Third—Because there is a probability that all the chief powers of Europe will eventually be drawn into the fight, and so become extensive purchasers in this country.

Should England engage, the consequences would be very important, especially if the war should have considerable duration. On this coast there is a Russian fleet which would probably spare a vessel or two to lie in wait off the Columbia river to intercept British ships on which Oregon depends principally for the exportation of her wheat. These risks would pretty certainly make high rates. After a time the place of British tonnage for our wheat trade would be supplied by vessels of other nationalities; and this would be a golden opportunity for the revival of the American marine, which has been overshadowed by that of England ever since the outbreak of our war. For us, the immediate result of England's participation in the war would probably be injurious, as it would be an impediment to the exportation of our coming wheat crop. But in the long run it would be an immense advantage to our whole country, in which the Pacific States would largely share. The development of the ship-building interest would become a highly important industry on this coast, and to the profits of raising grain we should be able to add those of the carrying trade, now mainly controlled by England.

PINNEY'S CASE.

Pinney's revelations have been the burden of dispatches from San Francisco for more than a week, and the "visible supply" of sensations on this score doesn't appear to be at all approaching exhaustion. The great swindles in which Pinney was engaged were a direct consequence of the old method of politics. By the influence of "leading men" in the politics of California, Pinney was forced as a clerk on Paymaster Spalding. In this position he perpetrated the forgeries and frauds, for which he is now undergoing examination. Following is a specimen of the documents alleged to have been penned by Pinney

UNITED STATES NAVY PAY OFFICE,
SAN FRANCISCO, April 29, 1875.

$17,353 78, U S. Currency

I hereby certify that there will be paid to John O Hanscom or his order, the sum of $17 353 78 in U S. currency, on receipt at funds from the U S. Treasury for such purchase and the return of this certificate.

"Open Purchase Account" Bureau, "C & R

R S. SPALDING Pay Inspector, U. S. N.

The indictment charges that endorsements were forged on this and like documents, with intent to defraud. The plan, it appears, was very successful. At the time Pinney ran away it was claimed that the amount of the frauds was nearly a million dollars Examination of the above will show readily the methods by which the series of great swindles was accomplished

Names of very prominent politicians and many others have been mixed up a good deal with the disclosures. It remains to be seen whether the accusation is true or false. But of one thing there can be no doubt The system of appointments by political influence that places such men in important positions is essentially vicious The present administration has taken a stand against it, and the reform comes very seasonably.

Des Moines Register. No Iowa Republican can read Ben Wade's letter without feeling the bitterness of truth contained in it

AS TO MONOPOLY.

On Saturday last the Standard contained an article asserting that there has been heretofore a monopoly of telegraphic dispatches from which itself and other papers have been excluded. Nothing could be further from the fact. All news facilities which the OREGONIAN has through the Western Union telegraph have been open at all times for any competitor. The company will to day carry news as cheaply for any other paper as for the OREGONIAN It has at all times been ready to do so We have no favors of the telegraph company, we pay for what we get, and any other paper can get the same by paying the same rate The company conducts a business enterprise, however, and is not disposed to carry dispatches without pay nor does the OREGONIAN choose to share the reports it pays for with the Standard or any other concern, except on terms that are satisfactory in a business point of view This is a sufficient answer to the Standard's whine. It has not had dispatches because it had no money, and it costs money to run a newspaper. What would be said of a person without capital or resources, who was trying to do a successful banking or mercantile business in competition with others, and finding it uphill work, should set up a cry that his neighbors had an odious monopoly which they refused to share with him? Yet this is just what is done by those who grumble about a "monopoly" of news. They simply complain that they haven't means to publish a newspaper in a field already occupied. Perhaps this is a misfortune, but it doesn't justify misrepresentation of the facts. We too, however, have a complaint to make. We always thought it would be a nice thing to own a bank. But parties here have a monopoly, and refuse to divide with us.

In a French publication which is recognized as a leading authority on international law the "Eastern Question" is reviewed in its international aspects by M. Jacquemyns, a writer of wide reputation on this and similar subjects, and the point is fully made that the great powers, by their participation in the conference at Constantinople just before the war broke out, openly avowed the right of intervention between the Turkish government and its Christian subjects. He proceeds to show that, having done this, they cannot now deny to Russia the right, as nearest neighbor of the oppressed, to go to their aid. Russia has managed the diplomacy of this matter with great cleverness. Her circumspection and adroitness on this occasion have been in remarkable contrast with the obstinacy and headlong rage of the Emperor Nicholas in the transactions that brought on the Crimean war Even England can now have no excuse to interfere, except the assertion that she needs Constantinople or must keep Russia out of it.

With that sublime self assertion that always characterized him, Carlyle is out with one of his sounding declamations against the war party in England. He says: "The newspaper cry against Russia is to me no more respectable than the howlings of Bedlam, proceeding as it does from the deepest ignorance, egotism and petty jealousy." And the sage of Chelsea then goes on to argue the question and to involve himself in its complications till, like his philosopher in Sartor Resartus, he reaches "those infinitely expanded regions close bordering on the impalpable inane." Carlyle is just the man who can do that.

A correspondent in Washington county writes:

In your excellent article on "War and Wheat," in OREGONIAN of May 11th, you state the price of wheat in 1875 at Liverpool at 7ds 9d, and as being nearly 10s above present prices. Did not that price apply to the quarter and not to the cental?

Certainly; the figures represented the price per quarter of 550 lbs. Perhaps this would have been more clear had it been fully expressed; but the matter was hardly misunderstood. All readers, we may suppose, interpreted it as our correspondent has done.

In its address to the public, under the new management, the Eugene Guard says: "It depends now on the support given us by the people of Lane county, particularly the Democratic party, whether we succeed or fail." Wouldn't it be a better idea to make so complete a newspaper that men of all parties would want it? It is now even less comfortable than it used to be to publish a paper with a feeling that it depends on a political party.

Victoria newspapers fully believe that England will take a hand in the war. The Colonist says that Derby's note indicates a purpose that makes partic pation in the struggle inevitable. If this should come to pass, Victorians some fine morning will probably be awakened by a Russian steamer anchored at Beacon Hill and dropping shells into the town, making a bloody, blasted row, you know.

FORTUNATE ESCAPE—HEAVY FALL.—Yesterday forenoon, as the West Side train was approaching the Fourth street bridge, on its way north, a fearful accident came near occurring. It happens that a man named George Bowen started to cross the bridge, and when about half way over discovered the train bearing down upon him at a rapid rate of speed. Bowen, fully realizing the danger of the situation, attempted to get out of the way by running. However, the train gained on him so rapidly that he was forced to drop between the ties and swing himself down by grasping the timbers with both hands. The engineer also perceived the danger, and did everything in his power to bring the train to a halt. Bowen was not a moment too soon, for he had scarcely swung himself below the track when the train dashed over him. He was then dragged a distance of nearly 40 feet. His injuries are quite serious; but not considered dangerously fatal. A number of persons witnessed the accident, who hastened to the assistance of Bowen. He was stunned by the fall, but soon revived sufficiently to tell his name and where he was stopping. He informed them that he boarded at Mrs. Dougherty's, who lives on Alder street, between Third and Fourth. An express wagon was procured and the injured man conveyed to St. Vincent's Hospital where he will receive every necessary attention. His escape from an instant and awful death was extremely fortunate. AMUSEMENTS.

LA SONNAMBULA—FAUST.—In response to many requests made, the English and Comic Opera Company repeated Bellini's beautiful opera, "La Sonnambula," last evening at New Market Theatre. Without any disparagement whatever as to the manner in which this opera was produced on its initial presentation, the rendition last evening was much superior to the preceding one, and in every respect afforded a fuller sense of satisfaction to the audience. The singing was most excellent, and the acting could scarcely have been improved upon. Miss Winston sustained the role of "Armina" in a manner worthy of her reputation as a sterling artiste, while Mr. Tilla was in superb voice. The acting of that gentleman was a decided improvement over his former personation of "Elvino," and we have never heard his voice to such admirable advantage as last evening. The opera was produced capitally and with strict regard to costume and effect, and it remains a matter of regret that more liberal patronage was not accorded this deserving production.

This evening's splendid attraction will be offered—Gounod's master composition "Faust." This opera will be rendered in English, which will undoubtedly be a rich musical treat to those who have heard it sung in Italian. The cast—which has been published includes the full strength of the company. No one who can appreciate music should fail to attend this evening. Reserved seats can be secured at Gray's Music Store.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

TEA SOCIAL.—The Tea Social is comparatively a new sensation in the church entertainment line, and seems to be quite a popular affair as managed by the ladies of the Taylor street M. E. Church. The plan is to provide a light supper for all who attend, commencing at six o'clock, P. M. Friends are invited to come and take tea with the ladies instead of taking their evening meal at home. The gentleman who cannot stay during the entire evening are permitted to come and go at pleasure. From six to eight P. M. is spent in the taking of refreshments and in social intercourse, and from eight till nine is occupied with literary and musical exercises. An entertainment of this kind will take place this evening in the vestry of the Taylor Street M. E. Church and the public are invited. An admission fee of twenty five cents is all that is required for the entire evening, the object being not so much to make money as to promote sociability among those who attend.

SMALLPOX SCARE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In the Welcome of Sunday last an item, in reference to a rumor that smallpox had appeared in an immigrant family in East Portland, was furnished by the regular contributor to that journal, whose sole interests lie in the prosperity of that side of the river. Being a man whose truthfulness is above question, and living within a few blocks of the immigrant family, his report was certainly worthy of consideration. Inquiries disclose that there was such a report, arising from the fact that a contagious disease—black measles—existed in the family. A self-instituted censor, in your issue of to day, whose ignorance of the wording of a simply constructed item, prevented him from distinguishing between a rumor and a positive assertion pronounced the item in the Welcome as false. Mr. I. N. Saunders should bear in mind that city officials who are not above suspicion of being bribed by these criminally accused sometimes have to swallow their own nauseous doses. And as he has shown such aptness to prevaricate, I would advise him to spend his time in trying to cultivate a sense of truthfulness, instead of publicly showing his petty spleen in unnecessary controversies.

J. F. ATKINSON,
Publisher Welcome.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Our correspondent, under date of May 14th, sends the following:

The several Sabbath schools of the city, have an average attendance of about 1,000.

Saturday last was one of the busiest days our merchants have seen for some time.

Quite a number of Marion county school teachers visited the District Institute held at Monmouth last week.

A good number of Odd Fellows leave to day for Portland, to attend the Grand Lodge which meets to morrow. The three lodges of this city send seven representatives.

Boothby and Stapleton, the contractors for finishing the M. E. Church, will commence operations this week. When completed this Church will have the finest audience room of any in the State.

About half a dozen of our most entertaining young ladies are making arrangements for having a strawberry party, each one invites her escort, pays the carriage hire, and foots the bills generally. It remains to be seen who the favored gentlemen are.

Prof. Wood, a blind musician, is announced to give a concert in the Opera House on Wednesday evening next. It is to be hoped he will have a full house, as it is known he is worthy of confidence. He will be assisted by several of our prominent vocalists.

Mrs. Gertrude E. Miller leaves on the outgoing steamer for Oakland, Cal. A change of climate is the object, and her many friends here will hasten to welcome her home with health and strength renewed. Miss Nora Simpson, of your city, will accompany her.

An amusing incident occurred at the University the other day. During opening exercises one morning, several notable visitors made their appearance and took back seats. The school arose and commenced singing the old song "Hold the Fort." Prof. Gatch stepped down the aisle and invited the visitors to seats on the stage. As they started up, the Prof. in the lead, the school began singing the second verse:

"See the hosts of sin advancing,
Satan leading on,"

This was too much for the solemnity of the occasion, and caused considerable merriment, which was enjoyed heartily by the school as well as the visitors.

A CRIMINAL AFFAIR.

The following is taken from the Salem Record. Names of the parties are well known, but for the present are suppressed:

A strange case of infatuation has just come to light, the details of which we cannot give in full. Yesterday morning one of our best known Marion county citizens made his wife and several children a long farewell and left them, as he stated, forever. He frankly told his wife and a few friends that for many years he had been corresponding with his first love, who lives in California. She is now a widow and bids him come to her, and in response, he cruelly leaves his family and started as above stated, to follow her wicked beckoning. Strange infatuation that such a man, honored and respected in the community in which he lives, should, by this act, forever cast himself outside of the pale of respectability and cast a shadow over the life of a trusting, confiding wife, and cause his children to hang their heads in shame whenever their father's name shall hereafter be mentioned.

The largest assortment of embroidery in the city can be found at J. Harris & Son's Emporium of Fashion.

TUESDAY MORNING, MAY 15, 1877.

THOMPSON OF "ANGELS."

[Bret Harte in "Puck."]

It is the story of Thompson—Thompson, the hero of "Angels:"
Frequently drunk was Thompson, but always polite to the stranger;
Light and free was the touch of Thompson upon his revolver;
Great the mortality incident on that lightness and freedom;

Yet not happy or gay was Thompson, the hero of "Angels,"
Often spoke to himself in accents of anguish and sorrow,
"Why do I make the graves of the frivolous youth who in folly
Thoughtlessly pass my revolver, forgetting its lightness and freedom?

"Why, in my daily walks, does the surgeon drop his left eye lid,
The undertaker smile, and the sculptor of gravestone marbles
Lean on his chisel and gaze? I care not o'er much for attention;
Simple am I in my ways, save but for this lightness and freedom."

So spake that pensive man—the Thompson, the hero of "Angels"
Bitterly smiled to himself, as he strode through the chaparel, musing,
"Why, ha! ha!" echoed the pines in their dark olive depth far resounding,
"Why, indeed?" whispered the sage brush, that bent 'neath his feet non-elastic.

* * * * * * *

Pleasant indeed was that morn that dawned o'er the bar room at "Angels,"
Where in their manly blood's prime was gathered the pride of the hamlet.
Six "took sugar in theirs," and nine to the barkeeper lightly
Smiled as they said, "Well, Jim, you can give us our regular old fusil."

Suddenly, as the gray hawk swoops down on the barn-yard, alighting
Where, pensively picking their corn, the favorite pullets are gathered,
So in that festive bar-room dropped Thompson, the hero of "Angels,"
Grasping his weapon dread with his pristine lightness and freedom.

Never a word he spoke; divesting himself of his garments,
Danced the war dance of the playful yet truculent Modoc,
Uttered a single whoop, and then in the accents of challenge,
Spoke: "I beheld in me a Crested Jay Hawk of the Mountain."

Then rose a pallid man—a man sick with fever and ague;
Small was he, and his step was tremulous, weak and uncertain;
Slowly a Derringer drew and covered the person of Thompson,
Said in his feeblest pipe, "I'm a Bald Headed Snipe of the Valley."

As on its native plains the kangaroo, startled by hunters,
Leaps with successive bounds, and hurries away to the thickets,
So leaped the "Crested Hawk," and quietly hopping behind him
Ran and occasionally shot that "Bald Headed Snipe of the Valley."

Vain at the festive bar still lingered the people of "Angels,"
Hearing afar in the woods the petulant pop of the pistol;
Never again returned the "Crested Jay Hawk of the Mountain."
Never again was seen the "Bald Headed Snipe of the Valley."

Yet in the hamlet of "Angels," when truculent speeches are uttered,
When bloodshed and life alone will atone for some trifling misstatement,
Maidens and men in their prime recall the last hero of "Angels"—
Think of and vainly regret the "Bald Headed Snipe of the Valley!"

NOTES AND FANCIES.

Norwich Bulletin: "The bashful man who asked his girl if her favorite beverage wasn't 'pop,' was referred to her popper."

In a fashionable family the word "style" is often used, and such distinction given to it that the youngest—a child of six or seven—on retiring for the night was heard to make this petition: "Now I lay me down to sleep;" "God bless dear papa and mamma, and, oh, dear Lord, please make us very stylish."

A French policeman recently arrested three prisoners, and not having the handcuffs to secure them, he just cut off their suspender buttons. Their hands were thus occupied, and they couldn't run away, so they were marched safely to prison.

A young lady whose reading is confined principally to the novels of Ouida and Mrs. Southworth, asked her young man the other evening whether the Postmaster-General had any other duties to perform besides putting gum on postage stamps.

Hobart Pasha, admiral of the Turkish navy, is also captain in the British navy, drawing £1 a day as an officer on the retired list. Mrs. Hobart, who has been with him at Constantinople, died at that city three weeks ago, while Hobart Pasha was absent inspecting the fleet.

Mr. Wong Ching Foo has arrived in New York with a mind bent upon enlightening benighted Americans as to the rare beauties of the Buddhist religion. Mr. Foo hails from the Celestial Kingdom—that is, the terrestial one of that name—and the faith that he proposes to propagate is already the religion of four hundred millions of people, or one-third of the human race.

Miss Emma A. Smith, of Peoria, has been appointed assistant entomologist for Northern Illinois. It is shrewdly suspected that when a caterpillar gets down the back of her neck she does not philosophically pluck him forth and describe him, but screams like any untitled female.

Norristown Herald: Professor Swift says that the comet discovered by Borelli, of France, on the 8th of February, has "neither nucleus, tail, nor envelopes." If Borelli can't discover any more perfect comet than that he'd better retire from the business and hand over his telescope to a man better posted in comets. A comet without neither tail or nucleus is bad enough, but one without envelopes—and perhaps minus postage stamps, also—is a glaring swindle.

GRANT'S FINANCES.—A Washington special to the Boston Post gives this: Ex President Grant reached here last night, and is registered at Willard's Hotel as an American citizen from Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. To-day a large number of his friends called upon him, including the ex-members of his Cabinet. He will remain here a week or so. His friends say that financially he is depressed, and that about the only thing he saved from the wreck of his profligate administration is what little he put away in his stocking as the savings from his $50,000 salary. It is known that he lost heavily with Tom Murphy on what is known as the Boulevard property, near the Central park in New York, and that to save the foreclosure of certain mortgages he discounted to a broker his last year's salary. This speaks well for his personal honesty, inasmuch as he was beset by as hungry a horde of public plunderers as disgraced any President's administration. He will call on all of his old friends this week, and will sail for Europe early in May.

WHY LIFE IS A BURDEN.—The Austin (Nev.) Reveille thus explains: We were accosted on the street by a small boy last evening, who thus addressed us: "Say, mister, will you put somethin' in the paper?" "What is it you wish inserted in that family journal, the Reveille, my son?" we said in reply." "Well," he said, "some of the boys up to the public school is a cuttin' the other fellers out of their gals." Poor little boy, in the freshness of his innocent youth, he little knows that getting cut out of a "gal" by another "feller" is a sorrow not confined to school boys alone. He does not dream that boys of a larger growth know the deep poignancy of sitting on the fence and seeing another "feller" escorting their hearts' idol home from church. That boy has more to learn than is taught in schools.

IN IOWA.—The subjoined is from the Philadelphia Times:

A general election occurs in Iowa this year, and the usually solid and triumphant Republican party of that State is solid no more. It is split to pieces on the President's Southern policy—Iowa being the only State where any formidable opposition to the administration has been shown thus far. The contest will not only involve a number of State officers, from governor down, but a legislature is to be chosen which is to name a successor to Senator Allison. Mr. Allison naturally wants to succeed himself, but he is between two very hot fires. He is by nature a conservative man, and inclined to give the President a hearty support, but he does not distinctly see how he is going to dodge successfully all the bricks that will be thrown during the coming campaign, they will come from so many and such unexpected quarters.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

Financial.

MONDAY EVENING, May 14, 1877.

Gold in New York, 105¾.

Legal Tenders in Portland—buying 93¾; selling, 94¾.

Silver Coin—4@5 per cent. discount.

We hear of no new features in the local money market, and as the bulk of produce shipments for the spring are over there is just now no call on the banks from that direction, except occasional requirements from the fisheries, which are increasing their outturn very greatly for a few days past. The wool exports this season, it is presumed, will require a larger amount of capital than ever before in Oregon, but as buyers are already appearing in the market in very considerable numbers we shall probably witness no lack of funds to move the season's clip quite rapidly when it begins to come forward.

In the relative supply and demand of capital in the local market there is no important change, and with but few heavy transactions rates for loans and discounts remain about as ruling for the last month. A very considerable amount of capital has been drawn out of the stock market on this coast during the past fortnight, and some of this is seeking investment here. Though the recent heavy fall in this reckless business of stock dealing has swept away a good many fortunes and left numerous wrecks to mark the track where the tide of speculation swept along, once freed from its dangerous influence, all legitimate branches of trade and commerce on the Pacific coast, will be more prosperous and certainly safer. The mania for stock speculation has long been regarded by the best business men on the coast as the bane of trade interests, and while, if properly restricted, it might not be so hurtful, the passion for it grows upon men like that for gaming until it unfits them for the more plodding duties of ordinary business avocations. It will be well if the lessons which the enormous decline has taught shall be remembered and heeded.

Latest advices of a commercial nature from the East indicate a somewhat revived condition of trade and renewed activity in manufacturing operations, induced principally by the war in Europe and confined to articles affected thereby. The banking transactions of the principal commercial cities of the Atlantic coast and Mississippi valley for the last half of April show an increase of business over the corresponding weeks of 1876 of some 27½ per cent. On the whole, therefore, there are substantial evidences of a greater amount of funds deposited, discounted, loaned etc., during these weeks than during the same weeks of last year. The causes must lie in the facts that the country either has larger quantities of grain, provisions and goods to dispose of now than then, or that causes more potent to attract them to the market are operating to call them forth, or that both are now present reviving the trade and commerce of the commercial centers of the Union.

Domestic Produce.

The week now beginning, it is apprehended, will not be one of any great amount of activity in this department of trade, for the reason that in leading commodities the surplus is well nigh exhausted. These include wheat and of course flour, oats, barley, fruits, ripe and dried, etc. Provisions also will not be likely to figure largely in our exports for the remainder of the season and until harvest shipments must inevitably be light compared with the former months of the year.

The market for home produce has undergone no important change as to prices since last week. Breadstuffs are quiet with ready takers of all offering at quoted rates and light shipments. We are informed of a few lots of wheat still held in this valley, but the owners being under no pressure to sell, and sanguine of a continued advance, demand a figure greatly above anything which shippers can now see in the markets abroad. Quotations are nominally given to day by nearly all dealers here, and owing to the meagreness of our usual telegraphic advices from the Eastern, California and foreign markets, it is very difficult to arrive at a definite conclusion in regard to prices.

A good many predict a long war in Europe, that England will ultimately become involved in it, and that of course wheat is certain to command a high price for a long time to come, but all this is uncertain and forms a somewhat unsafe basis for business calculations, such as most of the sensible men composing the bread-producers of Oregon will hardly care to rely upon. That the war to a great extent makes the high prices now prevailing is true, but that it is certain to last, or that the advance is wholly attributable to it, is not true. The short supply of wheat in the great grain marts of England would doubtless have sent prices up to near present rates had no war occurred, and a permanent cessation of hostilities would not reduce prices much until harvest for the simple reason that the supply is not adequate to the demand. Oats are in very fair request both for the home trade and for shipment, though inferior or dark lots of a quality for seed or milling purposes are not much sought after. Choice lots readily command 2 cents per lb. Mill feed shows less activity as the season progresses, but the high price for wheat tends to offset any tendency to a decline. Hay, owing to the excellent pasturage at all points supplied by this market is dull, and while choice baled timothy is quoted nominally at $16 per ton, there is but little demand, and loose cannot be placed readily at $14.

Provisions are in fair receipt with no change, except perhaps a downward tendency in some articles of dairy products. Eggs are dull at quotations with chances for a decline. Very few lots of wool have yet reached this market, and they hardly establish prices which are nominally given with the wide range of 15@22 cents per lb, the latter being for choice valley wool.

Chicago Markets.

CHICAGO, May 15.—On 'change business, though not driving, and characterized by the excitement and violent fluctuations of the preceding month, has been very large, and markets have been sufficiently unsettled to admit of speculation in almost every commodity. On Monday June wheat sold at $1 71@1 80; Tuesday, $1 65¾@1 71; Wednesday, $1 62@1 70; Thursday, $1 69@1 72½; Saturday, $1 70¼@1 75. These would be, in ordinary times, most remarkable fluctuations, but considering the late experience it is a going down. Wheat has attracted rather more attention and bids fair, before long to again take up the place of the chief speculative cereal. The greatest fluctuation in corn in any day was 3½ cents, and the difference between the highest and lowest prices during the week was 6¼ cents. The stocks of grain are steadily and rapidly decreasing, not so very much on account of great shipments as of light receipts. Closing quotations are for cash: Wheat, $1 69¼; corn, 53½@; oats, 43½; rye, 87@; barley, 75@. Receipts for the week: Wheat, 84,000; corn, 909,000; oats, 267,000. Shipments of wheat, 259,000; corn, 644,000; oats, 464,000. Receipts the same time last year: Wheat, 199,000; corn, 54,000; oats, 248,000. Shipments: Wheat, 556 000; corn, 1,151,000; oats, 547,000. Provisions have been in good demand, but prices are nearly $1 under those of last week, closing $19 75 for pork and $9 45 for lard. Business generally has only been fair; jobbers complain that sales are for small amounts, and that merchants seem to fear and distrust the future.

Positive Proof of his Wonderful Skill.

Testimony that Cannot be Contradicted.

Reliable Witnesses Testifying What he has Done for Them.

Perfect Cures where all other Treatment had Failed.

Crowds Coming from all Parts on the Sound to Visit Him.

The Following Certificates Speak for Themselves:

TO DR. PAUL M. BRENAN, Tremont House, Seattle—For the past year and a half I have been suffering from Nervous and General Debility, Kidney Disease, Loss of Flesh and Strength, dizziness in the head and a constant pain through the back and loins. I became so debilitated and broken down that I was unfitted for business. I have been to Victoria and all over the coast under medical treatment for the past nine months, without receiving any benefit whatever, and had almost given up hopes of ever recovering, until I came under your treatment, about seven weeks ago. From the very first your treatment seemed to work like a charm, and I constantly improved from the beginning. I have gained 14 pounds of flesh, and I am now thanks to your skillful treatment perfectly well, and am able to return to my business on the Snohomish. JAMES KING.

Seattle, March 31, 1877.

To the People: I have been troubled with chronic Nasal Catarrh for years, the disease being so aggravated that there was constantly an effusion of matter passing down into my throat behind the palate and down through my nostrils.

My nose became depressed between the eyes and swollen on each side. I was told by physicians that it was a polypus; that some of the blood vessels were involved and that the removal would endanger my life by hemorrhage. I became so bad that I made up my mind that I must have immediate relief or die.

As a last resort I applied to Dr. Paul M. Brenan, who, after a moment's examination, determined what to do. He said the nasal bone was involved and diseased, and that there would have to be a portion of it removed. He at once removed the bone tumor containing the ulcer; also the diseased portion of bone and cartilaginous gland and cured the catarrh. I am now perfectly well and as free from disease as ever I was in my life.

THOMAS D. MURPHY.

Seattle, April 5th, 1877.

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN—Dear Sir: I take great pleasure in stating for the benefit of those who are afflicted with any chronic disease, that I am now a well man. For the past two years I have been under the medical treatment of different physicians, from which I have received no benefit. I have been suffering with general and nervous debility, a difficulty in my stomach, and at times dizziness and severe headache, almost incapacitating me for work. About three weeks ago I put myself under your care, and I can say with delight that I am cured and feel like myself again, after having partaken of your skillful treatment. To me now, labor seems a pleasure. I say this much, hoping it will be the means of attracting the suffering to you who can relieve and cure them.

Yours Truly, JOHN BALLARD,
Employed at Colman's Saw Mill.

It will not publish any cures performed by me unless by the full consent of the parties.
